"This book is recommended for parents, educators, health professionals, school leaders, and community members who are looking for ways to improve access, understanding, support, and resources to all students."

—MiddleWeb

"Bodily autonomy is such an important topic to bring up to kids as early as they can understand it, and Bowers creates a tactful, accessible forum with this story. This book should be in every classroom."

—School Library Journal, Starred Review

Praise for What Does Grief Feel Like (9781631987069)

"What Does Grief Feel Like? is a beautifully illustrated interactive book for children grieving significant losses. Rather than instruct them how to feel it allows them to explore their own feelings and experiences with gentle guidance and understanding."

—Donna L. Schuurman, Ed.D., FT, senior director of advocacy and education and executive director emeritus, Dougy Center

"With What Does Grief Feel Like?, Dr. Leigh addresses the experience of loss and sorrow for young children. She has created a powerful tool for both clinicians and families. The text is written in clear, age-appropriate language to help children understand and manage the complex feelings that grief evokes. Additionally, the resource list is invaluable. Dr. Leigh's book will become an indispensable resource and an important contribution to the body of literature addressing children's grieving."—Dr. Kathy Hull, clinical psychologist and founder of George Mark Children's House

"A beautiful and tender book for children that will expand the emotional capacity and depth of understanding for them and the adults who love them."—Dr. Joanne Cacciatore, professor at ASU and author of Bearing the Unbearable: Love, Loss, and the Heartbreaking Path of Grief

Praise for Teaching and Supporting English Learners: A Guide to Welcoming and Engaging Newcomers (9781087648866)

"Every educator and school and district administrator should own a copy of this book and read it often, to remind us, as educators, why we must learn about newcomer students and their experiences, strengths, and bravery. Eugenia Mora-Flores and Stephanie Dewing have beautifully framed quality instruction, family engagement, and healthy practices grounded in the experiences of multilingual learners, and in particular, the journeys of newcomer students. The authors thoughtfully engage readers in reflecting, finding, and confirming their purpose by embedding students' journeys and experiences coming to the USA. They remind us of why we must continue to improve instruction, services, and supports for newcomer multilingual students. Educators, family and community liaisons, counselors, and administrators, both experienced and new to the profession, will find utility in the many tools, resources, visuals, and reflection questions embedded throughout the book."

—Morgan Cox, Director, Office of Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Education, Colorado

"I appreciate both Dr. Mora-Flores and Dr. Dewing for taking the time and initiative to emphasize the importance of embracing our newcomers. As an elementary school administrator, I appreciate the availability of this book to engage in ongoing dialogue with my staff. As an English learner this book gives me great hope as it informs educators about the best ways to connect with newcomers." —Arturo Navar, Achievement Specialist, Orenda Education (former Administrator and Elementary Principal, Lynwood Unified School District, California)
